

Hebrew scholar gets exit visa

From our Special Correspondent on East European Affairs

Professor Mikhail Zand and 23 other Soviet Jews have received permission to emigrate to Israel, according to news agency reports from Moscow.

Professor Zand, 44, will leave the Soviet Union next week, with his wife, son and daughter and three other relatives.

He is the co-author of the only monograph on the Hebrew language written in the Soviet Union. His imprisonment and 14-day hunger strike in prison were reported in the Jewish Chronicle last month, as was his dismissal from his job.

There has been no decision on an application for an exit visa by Mikhail (Moisei) Kalik, 44, a gation for "private entrepreneurial activity"—showing one of his films at a lecture.

A declaration signed by 80 Moscow Jews which was circulated in the Soviet capital last week, said that the visa commission, set up on March 1, was due to wind up its work last Tuesday.

"It is quite clear that the improvement in acceptance and review of requests for departure to the State of Israel bore only a temporary character," the declaration stated.

The document, addressed to President Podgorny, expressed fear that the winding up of the special commission would mean a return to the slow visa-issuing procedure in force before March.

It complains that "extra-judicial persecution is continuing against citizens who have made requests to leave" and that the authorities are "uttering completely absurd and unfounded reasons for refusing departures."

Mrs Raiza Palatnik, the Jewish woman who was being held in solitary confinement in Odessa, has now been transferred to the women's prison in the city as a result of protests in the West. Her mother has been allowed to visit her in gaol, with an interrogator present.

Regular prayers 'not normal'

From our Correspondent Jerusalem

A congregation praying in a private flat was likely to disturb the rest of the other residents of the block—particularly on the Sabbath, which for most people was their one day off work.

This was said by a Tel Aviv magistrate, Mr Zeev Lotan, when he made absolute an order forbidding the use of a private flat as a synagogue.

Mr Lotan added that regular organised prayer was not the normal way of life of an Israeli.

AJC memorial for Blaustein

From our Correspondent New York

This announcement was made by Dr Morton K. Blaustein, the son of the late philanthropist and industrialist, at a dinner on Thursday opening the 65th annual AJC meeting.

Mr Blaustein, who had served as president of the AJC died last November, aged 78.

Nun joins protest

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

Sister Rachel, a nun belonging to the Roman Catholic order of Our Lady of Zion, joined a group of Jewish housewives on Wednesday, when they picketed the Central Criminal Court at the Old Bailey to stress the difference between the fairness of British courts and the secrecy of the proceedings in Soviet courts.

From there, the group went to the building of The Times and picketed there. They carried placards equating the paper with Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper, and describing its report of the Leningrad trial as "a shame" and "disgusting."

The women, from the group which has also taken up the case of Mrs Raiza Palatnik, spent almost an hour outside the building arguing with the paper's editor, Mr William Rees-Mogg, and his deputy, Mr Louis Heren.

The women will hold a one-hour vigil, from 10.30 a.m. on Sunday, outside the Soviet Embassy in London. Similar vigils will also be held outside Soviet consular offices in provincial centres.

A van, plastered with protest placards and broadcasting a call to stop the Leningrad trial, began driving round the streets of London on Wednesday.

Herut, which organised it, will keep the van on the streets in every day the trial lasts.

Mrs Rivka Alexandrovitch, the mother of Ruth, the 23-year-old girl who is in a Russian prison, had a meeting with Cardinal Humeau and a representative of the Archbishop of Canterbury in London this week. They promised to help her in her attempts to obtain the release of her daughter.

Mrs Meir to meet Socialists

From our Correspondent Jerusalem

On her way to Finland, Mrs Meir will stop in Copenhagen for discussions with Mr Hilmer Baunsgaard, the Danish Prime Minister. She will meet Mr Olof Palme, the Swedish Prime Minister, and Mr Trygve Bratteli, the Norwegian Prime Minister, in Stockholm and Oslo respectively after the conference.

Polish spies in Denmark

From our Correspondent Copenhagen

A number of spies have been unmasked among the Jews who found asylum in Denmark and Sweden between 1968 and 1970 after leaving Poland where they were the victims of the anti-Zionist and antisemitic campaigns.

Several of these spies have been sentenced to prison terms and expelled.

One so-called refugee confessed to the Danish police that Polish intelligence had ordered him to spy on his former compatriots. This man arrived in the Danish port of Skagen posing as a trawler fisherman.

It is now known that a number of people in Poland were victimised as a result of the operations of a man and wife in the Danish towns of Frederickshejvn and Aalborg, and the Swedish city of Gothenburg, where they were arrested.

Sadat gets rid of Nasser's men

Jewish Chronicle Foreign Staff

After a week of the long knives, President Sadat is clearly in possession of the field in Egypt. He has purged most of Nasser's men from the country's leadership and all the instruments of government, including the Army and the police, have sworn loyalty to him. The people, as far as they have expressed an opinion, are behind him, at least for the time being.

The second act in Sadat's bid to retain supreme power (the first was the dismissal of Vice-President Ali Sabry at the beginning of May) came on Thursday of last week, with the dismissal of Egypt's War Minister, General Mohammed Fawzi.

The following evening Sadat went on the air to announce that he had foiled an attempted coup, that he would "mince anyone who tries to undermine the unity of this nation," and "abolish centres of power."

He promised more democratic consultation and "a bonfire" of all records of tapped telephone conversations.

Six other Ministers "resigned" along with Fawzi, including the Minister of the Interior, Sharawi Gomha, whose power had derived from his control of the secret police.

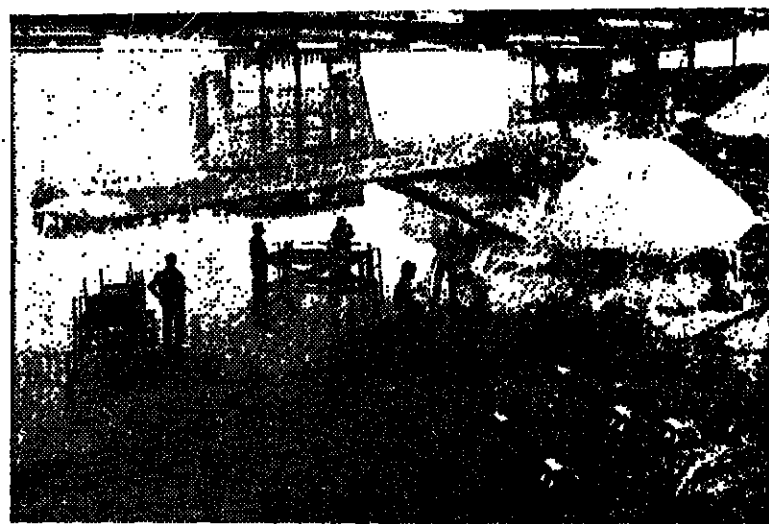

Since the initial purge, 17 members of the National Assembly have been unsent, senior officials of the police and information ser-

The Arava short take-off aircraft being produced by Israel Aircraft Industries, which has won an international award. It is hoped to display the prototype, of which a military version is to be made, at the Paris air show later this month.

Ministers to survive the carnage. Observers think that Sadat will turn the ASU into the instrument of his power.

Sadat's associates in the embryonic federation of Egypt, Libya and Syria sent delegations to Cairo last Friday to demonstrate their solidarity with him in his struggle for power. President Numeiry of the Sudan, went to Cairo himself for the same purpose.

The other Arab Governments have been sitting on the fence and refraining from comment, except Iraq, where Baghdad radio reported that Egypt started expelling the "3,000 Soviet experts" last Friday.

The Soviet Union has remained signally silent on the Cairo upheaval, reporting the new Government appointments without comment.

Europeans favour Arab line

Jewish Chronicle Foreign Staff

Israel has made known her "displeasure" at a document setting out the views of the Common Market Governments on Middle East settlement. A communiqué issued by the Foreign Ministers of the six countries, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium and Luxembourg, last Friday said "full agreement has been reached on the document, worked out by a committee of experts of the Six."

On Tuesday the Foreign Ministers of the four countries seeking admission to the EEC, Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Sweden, discussed the proposals with their colleagues of the Six and are reported to have given their general agreement to the views expressed.

According to the communiqué, the Ministers favoured a peaceful solution in the Middle East, which was important for Europe and said the Six were ready to contribute to the economic and social stabilisation of the area.

They reiterated support for the Security Council resolution of November, 1967, stressing the need to apply it in all its provisions, and they called on the political committee to continue its work.

The French-initiated plan to co-ordinate the Middle East policies of the Common Market Governments has thus produced its first result, but it was far from what the French Government expected.

The Six's Middle East exercise began early this year, shortly after their Foreign Ministers had met in Munich to discuss military co-operation. As a first subject for harmonising their policies, the French offered the problem of the Middle East.

After several meetings of experts and the political directors of the Foreign Ministries of France, West Germany, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, five documents on five different subjects (the Straits of Tiran, the Suez Canal, Jerusalem, demilitarised zones and the Palestinians) were amalgamated into a report on the Middle East.

Annexes composed of detailed studies of these different subjects were taken as working papers. The experts' report had suggested that the communiqué should contain a number of additional points, but no agreement could be reached on them.

They included the following: A settlement should be based on non-acquisition of territories by

Rabin to leave Washington

From our Correspondent Jerusalem

Israeli press reports suggested on Wednesday that Mr Itzhak Rabin would be retiring from his post as Israeli Ambassador in Washington towards the end of the year to take up a Cabinet post. Speculation about a possible successor involves, among others, the director-general of the Premier's Office, Dr Yacov Herzog, and the assistant director-general of the Foreign Ministry, Mr Mordecai Gazit.

Why Sabry was sacked

Jewish Chronicle Foreign Staff

Details of the incident that prompted President Sadat to dismiss Ali Sabry from the Vice-Presidency have reached the Jewish Chronicle from reliable Arab sources close to the Egyptian régime.

The train of events was set in motion when the Soviet Ambassador to Egypt presented Sabry with a copy of confidential correspondence between Sabry and America's UN representative, Mr William Rogers, the American Secretary of State.

As soon as Sabry confronted that he thought an agreement had been reached on the Suez Canal, "not immediately, but some time in the future."

He added: "We are going to continue the discussions we have with the Secretary-General and Jarring, because the objective is a final peace agreement among parties."

Everywhere in the Middle East he and his delegation had walked, they had been impressed by the great confidence shown by everyone in Mr Jarring, Mr Rogers and the UN.

He said that he thought that he had "the same objective as Arab nations have and we have reached a final peace agreement which would solve the problems in the area."

Observers at the UN think Mr Rogers saw U Thant and Mr Jarring to show that it was not his intention to take the Middle East discussions out of the hands of Mr Jarring, who was entrusted with his mission by the Security Council.

The Big Four's UN representatives had a further meeting in their long series on Wednesday. The question of Big-Four guarantees of any Middle East settlement was thought to be high on the agenda.

Sources close to Mr Jarring, who saw Mr Yosef Tekoa (Israel's UN representative), and Mohammed El-Zayat (Egypt's UN representative) on Monday evening, said that he had no plans at present for any initiative on his own, but was prepared to wait and see how the Suez situation developed from his post in Moscow, where he is Swedish Ambassador.

The ball is expected to be tossed back to him when the Suez negotiations have made sufficient progress as a result of American efforts.

The Big Four's UN representatives had a further meeting in their long series on Wednesday. The question of Big-Four guarantees of any Middle East settlement was thought to be high on the agenda.

Sources close to Mr Jarring, who saw Mr Yosef Tekoa (Israel's UN representative), and Mohammed El-Zayat (Egypt's UN representative) on Monday evening, said that he had no plans at present for any initiative on his own, but was prepared to wait and see how the Suez situation developed from his post in Moscow, where he is Swedish Ambassador.

The ball is expected to be tossed back to him when the Suez negotiations have made sufficient progress as a result of American efforts.

Rogers keeps Thant informed

From our Correspondent United Nations

Mr William Rogers, the American Secretary of State, had a meeting on Monday with U Thant, the United Nations Secretary-General, and Mr Gunnar Jarring, the UN's special Middle East envoy, to brief them on his recent Middle East tour.

Also present at the meeting were Mr Joseph Sisco, Assistant Secretary of State for Near East Affairs, and Mr George Bush, Mr Rogers's UN representative. Mr Rogers accompanied Mr Rogers on his tour.

After the meeting, Mr Rogers said that he thought an agreement had been reached on the Suez Canal, "not immediately, but some time in the future."

He added: "We are going to continue the discussions we have with the Secretary-General and Jarring, because the objective is a final peace agreement among parties."

Everywhere in the Middle East he and his delegation had walked, they had been impressed by the great confidence shown by everyone in Mr Jarring, Mr Rogers and the UN.

He said that he thought that he had "the same objective as Arab nations have and we have reached a final peace agreement which would solve the problems in the area."

Observers at the UN think Mr Rogers saw U Thant and Mr Jarring to show that it was not his intention to take the Middle East discussions out of the hands of Mr Jarring, who was entrusted with his mission by the Security Council.

Palestinians are confused

From Atallah Mansour—Jerusalem

Nobody here believes that the latest events in Egypt are "a storm in a coffee cup"—President Sadat's description in his "spontaneous" address to the Egyptian people last Friday. Arabs in Jerusalem and the West Bank gathered in small groups to listen to Sadat's speech, in the hope of receiving a clear answer to the many questions raised by what has been happening in Egypt.

They were disappointed. For 85 of the 90 minutes his speech lasted, Sadat only added to the confusion.

Israeli circles do not believe that Sadat has any real intention of assuring Egyptians' civil rights. He made no mention of freedom of the press or of political parties.

How matters will develop depends on the Army, whose former Commander-in-Chief, General Ahmed Sedek, has now been appointed War Minister.

Although the Left wing of the Arab Socialist Union (Egypt's only permitted political grouping) has suffered a setback, the Soviet Union appears unworried and has accepted the official Egyptian line.

This is in keeping with Russia's past policy in Egypt. Since the early 1960s the Russians have sacrificed their Communist friends in Egypt. These were asked by Moscow to join the Arab Socialist Union, and those who refused to do so were arrested. Most of the political prisoners in Egypt are from their ranks.

However, the Russians are determined to prevent the recent visit by Mr William Rogers, the American Secretary of State, from developing into a turning-point in Egyptian-American relations, and the Soviet propaganda machine has already mounted a campaign of derision and criticism of Mr Rogers' Middle East tour.

Observers doubt Moscow's ability to stop such a development without violence in Egypt.

The Jordanian Government is officially "satisfied" with the situation in Egypt, hoping that Sadat's actions will put an end to the activities of extremist elements, including those who support the terrorists against King Hussein.

'Be generous to defeated'

From our Correspondent Jerusalem

Mr Teddy Kollek, the Mayor of Jerusalem, on Sunday night read Opposition City Council members a lecture on showing magnanimity in victory and spicing the feelings of the defeated. "You have to put yourself in their shoes without walking in them," Mr Kollek said.

He was commenting on such questions as, why the Israeli flag was not flown on the Tower of David on Independence Day (because it is the mascot of a former mosque), and why Jews were not allowed to pray on the Temple Mount (the is a matter for the Defence Ministry).

Mr Kollek told the council that 4,000 Arabs had been evacuated from the Jewish quarter in the Old City without incident and resettled elsewhere. There had not been a single complaint, he added.

'Arabs ready to talk to Israel'

Paris

Several Arab countries want a conference of Mediterranean States to help find a solution to the Middle East conflict and overcome the region's political and economic problems, according to Khalil Abou Hamad, the Lebanese Foreign Minister.

He said here on Monday that such a conference could include Israel. "Israel and the Arab States sit side by side at the United Nations, and although it might be somewhat premature to see Arabs and Israelis at a Mediterranean conference, the idea is quite conceivable," he told correspondents. Hamad met Pope Paul at the

Golda's advert

Mrs Golda Meir, the Israeli Premier, put an advertisement in the Israeli papers this week, seeking other members of the group with which she immigrated to Palestine from America 50 years ago. The advertisement said that she wanted to contact "other members and/or their families in Israel for a reunion at her residence in Jerusalem."

Vatican before coming to Paris for talks with Mr Maurice Schumann, the French Foreign Minister, at the week-end.

He also said that Jerusalem's universal character was "in danger."

A military shure-up in the Middle East is "quite possible," he then stated. "No one wants it, but the danger exists."

Hamad said he believed that a reopening of the Suez Canal, which had been closed for nearly four years, would lead to a thaw in the Middle East situation.—(Reuters)

Russian accusations against Israelis

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

A Russian claim that Israeli diplomats were implicated in the British protest campaign against the persecution of Jews in the Soviet Union has been denied by the Israeli Embassy in London.

A spokesman for the Embassy dismissed as "totally false" Russian allegations that Israeli diplomats were in any way involved in an incident at the Soviet consulate on Thursday of last week. The spokesman added that "the Embassy knew nothing about the documents alleged to have been found in a brief case after the incident and have never seen them."

Some of the 50 British Jews — including students and women — who went to the consulate to apply for visas to attend the trial of nine Jews in Leningrad and the pending one in Riga, were manhandled by staff members of the Soviet Embassy.

The incident also had diplomatic consequences as the Foreign Office later expressed the British Government's regret, and offered to consider greater protection for the Soviet Embassy and the consulate.

The Russian attempt to implicate Israeli diplomats was made at a hurriedly called press conference on the day following the incident, when they presented documents allegedly found in a briefcase left behind by one of the visa applicants, Mr Alan Freeman, chairman of the Universities Committee for Soviet Jewry.

One of the documents, the Soviet Embassy claimed, was a report by Mr Freeman on his committee's actions addressed to Mr Yitzhak Rabin, a political counsellor at the Israeli Embassy in London. Another document presented by the Russians was an application "to a certain embassy" by the committee for £244.48 for duplicating paper, plastic folders, postage, leaflets and advertising in connection with the protest campaign.

Although the Soviet Embassy did not present any proof that Mr Rabin responded to that report or that the Embassy answered the application for funds, it was still claimed that the documents revealed "a wide scope of Zionist activities and the connections of the anti-Soviet activists with Israeli officials."

allegedly belonging to Mr Freeman, which said that "all Jewish business, cultural and political links with the USSR should be pestered and embarrassed."

Violence on Thursday last week followed the discovery of anti-Zionist leaflets in the consular office by the Jewish visa applicants. When Mr Freeman starting reading out passages from the leaflet the Russians called in reinforcements from the Embassy. The doors were locked, curtains drawn, and Mr Freeman was taken to an upstairs office by two Russians who hit him. A woman applicant was slapped in the face and a man collapsed on the pavement and was taken to hospital after having been evicted from the consulate.

The Rev. Saul Amich, who was present at the consulate during the clashes, later described the Russian statement as "a pack of lies."

Jewish women are to start on Monday a 24-hour vigil outside the Soviet Embassy.

Distracting attention

A statement issued by the Israeli Embassy, however, pointed out that it was clear the "Soviet Embassy was attempting to distract public attention from the true facts about the anti-Jewish trial in Leningrad and those pending in other Russian cities." The Israelis added that "it was natural that the Anglo-Jewish community should be deeply disturbed about the plight of the Russian Jews. This concern," the Embassy statement said, "was fully shared by the people of Israel and by decent opinion elsewhere and will go on finding full expression until the Jews in the Soviet Union are permitted to maintain their faith and traditions or leave if they wish."

The Soviet Embassy statement claimed that the protest campaign was also "aimed at hardening Anglo-Soviet relations in the interests of a third State," apparently Israel. This was based on another document from the briefcase

Why Britain apologised

By our Parliament Correspondent

The incident involving Jewish demonstrators in a scuffle at the Soviet Consulate last week was raised in Parliament on Tuesday by Mr Clinton Davies (Labour, Wrexham), the American comedian, on a new Central asked why the Foreign Secretary sent an official to the Soviet Government to the Soviet Embassy last week. Davies said that a number of British citizens, including a woman, had been assaulted by Soviet officials.

Mr Anthony Royle, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replied that the British Government had special duty under international law to protect consulates and the Foreign Office expressed regret at the incident at the Soviet Consulate. He said that although the "when it became clear that the evidence supplied by the Soviet Consulate of some of the demonstrators had led to a disturbance."

Am I really needed?

Radio Jewry opens on Sunday

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

To a number from the musical "Fiddler on the Roof" the first regular Jewish programme in the history of British broadcasting will be launched on Radio London on Sunday.

The 20-minute programmes will be broadcast fortnightly at 10.15 on Sunday mornings and repeated at 1.45 p.m. on the following Mondays. Audiences will, however, be limited to those who have sets capable of receiving broadcasts on HF wavelengths.

Sunday's programme will include an introduction by Mr Victor Mishon, chairman of the Board of Jewish Radio and television committee. The Chief Rabbi will be interviewed on his experiences over four years in that office.

Men in the street will tell what they expect from a Jewish radio programme and children will talk about what being Jewish means to them. A social worker will call on a national emergency service and the elderly and the programme will close on a lighter note with an interview with Jack Benny, the American comedian, on Jewish humour.

Items prepared for later programmes include an interview with Leo Rosten, author of the book, "The Joy of Yiddish," another former chaplain in the American air force on the differences between the English and American Jewish communities.

Mr Michael Freedland, the producer, who has nine years of broadcasting experience with the BBC, told me that although the programme will have a regular forenoon slot it will occasionally be thrown into topical discussions, for instance on the problems of Jewish students. Mr Freedland also wants the programme to reflect Jewish views on political, social and moral issues.

Although the programme was initiated by the BBC, it is sponsored by the Board of Deputies, which has allocated a small budget for it. In accordance with the BBC's requirements the programme will avoid politics, must interest Gentile as well as Jewish audiences, must have some topicality and will be presented in an entertaining form. It will not serve as a mouthpiece for any particular section of the Jewish community and must not appear as the voice of Israel in Britain.

Board control

While Mr Freedland will have a free hand in the selection of people and topics, Mr Mishon told me that the Board of Deputies will exercise an overall control of editorial policy. Each programme will be heard by a panel appointed by the Board before broadcasting. Mr Mishon sees the aims of the programme as being not only educational and entertaining but also as serving as a spiritual link between the London Jewish community and those Jews who for various reasons could have no other contact with it apart from radio or television.

To some measure, Mr Mishon told me, the programme would be controversial, though it would present a balanced picture showing both sides of controversial issues. I hope, said Mr Mishon, that the Jewish community will exercise a balanced judgement of the programme, remembering that for its success it must be interesting and challenging, not merely an exercise in public relations.

American Government, faced as it was with the anti-Vietnam lobby and its financial problems would commit itself to putting troops into the Middle East if there were a confrontation with the Russians.

"I may be completely wrong, but the greatest fear I have is that of Israel withdrawing from the Suez Canal and the Russians crossing to the other side. It would be a catastrophe for the world," said Dr Wexler.

The grand president of B'nai B'rith in Britain, Mr Fred Worms, was in the chair. The plenary session was attended by 50 delegates representing Jewish communities in 45 countries and discussions ranged around Israel, Soviet Jewry and the Jewish position in Arab countries as well as Jewish youth problems.

Dr Wexler said he was not at all happy about the latest moves against Israel and the United States. He was not at all positive, in his own mind, whether the

JPA NATIONAL CANVASSING STARTS SUNDAY

Massive week-long effort pledged.

The JPA National Canvassing Week opens on Sunday and signals an all-out drive by Anglo-Jewry to reach its target for the 1971 Survival Campaign.

The face-to-face confrontation with the community will be one of the most intensive and best prepared fund raising drives ever undertaken by the JPA on a national scale.

The past week has seen scores of committees up and down the country meeting in emergency sessions to finalise their plans for the Canvassing Week, and indications are that more than 1000 canvassers will be in action during the week soliciting pledges from contributors who have not yet given to the '71 Appeal.

WEEK OFF WORK

As an example and an indication of the importance of the National Canvassing Week, the JPA's Honorary Officers and members of the Administrative Committee will take much of the week off from their own businesses to canvass major contributors in London and key Provincial centres.

Mr. Rosser Chinn, JPA Vice-Chairman, in charge of London Districts, reports that every committee in the area is ready for Canvassing Week with teams equipped with lists and appointment programmes.

Mr. Cyril Stein, JPA Vice-Chairman, in charge of Provincial Districts says every major centre is fully keyed for Canvassing Week.

SUPREME EFFORT

In a final call to JPA workers everywhere, Chairman Michael M. Sacher, called on every committee to spare no effort during the National Canvassing Week.

Mr. Sacher said: "It is not a question of pledges, but MEANINGFUL PLEDGES which reflect the understanding of Israel's needs. That is the response we want and nothing else will do."

Arab rally flops

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

A policeman holds back a young Arab who tried to grab the Israeli flag

The smallest ever crowd, fewer than 500 people, attended the so-called annual "Palestine Day" rally in Trafalgar Square on Saturday.

After speeches by representatives of El Fatah and various New Left groups they marched to the American, Israeli and Jordanian Embassies symbolically linking the enemies of Palestinians: imperialism, Zionism and Arab reactionaries.

The majority at the rally were Arabs, together with several Indians and Pakistanis and a few British New Leftists, including a local branch of the Young Liberals and the Maoist splinter group of the British Communist Party.

Most of the speakers condemned the present peace efforts in the Middle East, including the Rogers plan. The only Jewish speaker, Moshe Machover, from the anti-Zionist ultra-left Israeli Revolutionary Action Committee Abroad (Israca), warned that the Palestinians' struggle could only be solved within a world-wide socialist revolution.

Nabil Shaath, a leading El Fatah propagandist, said that the Palestinians had lost since last September as many people in their fight with King Hussein as in the "Jordanian massacre" itself.

The march was unusually quiet and was marked by only one incident when police prevented an Arab from leaving the column and attacking two people who were holding up an Israeli flag on the pavement.

New cemetery for Liberals

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

The Union of Liberal and Progressive Synagogues is to have its own cemetery at Edgwarebury, near Edgware. It will be a partner in the project with the Spanish and Portuguese community and the West London (Reform) Synagogue.

This represents the culmination of a long search by the union for a suitable site. The Liberal Jewish Synagogue's cemetery at Willesden will provide space in future only for its own members or for Liberal Jews who have already reserved plots there.

Woman elected Dr Zander retires treasurer

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

For what is believed to be the first time in Orthodox synagogue administration, the New London Synagogue, whose minister is Rabbi Dr Louis Jacobs, has elected a woman as an honorary officer.

At the annual meeting, held in the synagogue hall, St. John's Wood, London, on Sunday, Miss Ethel Wix, a solicitor, was elected as the synagogue's treasurer. She succeeds Mr David Franklin, who has been treasurer since the inception of the synagogue in 1964. The synagogue's chairman, Mr Bernard Spears, quipped that they had by the election of Miss Wix, struck a blow for the women's Lib movement!

The synagogue has now paid off the whole of the cost of the building—£154,840.

Ort in search of premises

Jewish Chronicle Reporter

British Ort cannot expand because of cramped conditions at its headquarters in South Molton Street, Mayfair. Protracted attempts to find new premises within a two-mile radius of London's West End have so far failed.

This was reported by Mrs Rene Soskin, chairman of British Women's Ort, who presided at the annual meeting held at Michael House, Baker Street, last week.

Presenting the accounts for the year, Mr Michael Naughton, the treasurer, said that income, at £112,448, was a little higher than the previous year's total. The organisation had exceeded the target set by World Ort by £12,000.

Mrs Soskin reported that Women's Ort had raised £16,500 in the past year.

Mr Harman (right) making a presentation to Dr Zander

After 25 years' service, Dr Walter Zander has retired as secretary of the British Friends of the Hebrew University. Tributes to his sterling work were paid last week at a reception held at the London home of Mr John S. Cohen.

Among those present were Mr Abraham Harman, president of the university; Professor A. Neuburger, chairman of the Friends' executive committee; Lord Samuel; Chief Rabbi Jakobovits; the Emeritus Chief Rabbi, Sir Israel Brodie; and Mr David Kessler, chairman and managing director of the Jewish Chronicle.

Dr Zander will continue to serve the university as a governor.

Golf club land for community

From our Correspondent—Leeds

The Moor Allerton Golf Club members gave the go-ahead at their annual meeting last week for a large plot of land in the Alwood area to be given to the Leeds Jewish community for "communal purposes."

The 4.5 acres of land is situated on the old golf course in Nursery Lane.

Mr Harry Brown, president of the Representative Council, described the move as a "very publicised act by the golf club and should be praised in the highest possible terms." Mr Brown emphasised that whatever was built on the site would have to be for the benefit of the entire community and not just one small section.

The final decision as to what happens with the land will rest with the executive committee of the Representative Council. Mr Brown said it was felt that a synagogue was needed on the site. To explore that possibility, the Representative Council will call a meeting of all Orthodox synagogues within the next two or three weeks when the matter will be discussed.

£18,500 plea to pay debt

The Leeds Jewish Education Board (Talmud Torah) is to launch an appeal for its "Building redemption fund" to pay off debt of £18,500 which the honorary officers say was inherited five years ago when they took over the running of the board.

By our Zionist Correspondent

Frequent visits to Israel by pupils and teachers of Jewish schools in Britain are yearning for a redemption fund, which has been planned by the Jewish Agency for Israel for two-month periods.

Mr Alchmel Rivad, managing director of the Agency, said that education and cultural work were the synagogue's increased their week, told me that the board could wish to take whole children's education. He said that one year's summer vacations for the year had already increased by £1,200.

It was a ridiculous situation, Mr Harris said, that if new books and equipment were needed there would be a careful check to see whether they could be afforded.

Under a new agreement with the Israeli Government the Agency will also be able to increase the number of Israeli teachers sent to Jewish day schools in Britain.

Name changed

The name of the Leeds Jewish Board of Guardians has been changed to the Jewish Welfare Board.

This was decided at last week's meeting of the board, which has been known as the Board of Guardians since it was formed 94 years ago.

In a statement to the press, the board said that it was felt that in view of the type of work carried out by the board during recent years the old name no longer reflected adequately its present-day function and that the new name would create a "better image."

PROFILE

Abe Silver

Abe Silver, vice-chairman and senior warden of the United Sheffield Hebrew Congregation, who recently celebrated his 70th birthday, has a long record of voluntary service which includes work for hospitals, for the handicapped, and for the synagogue.

He helped to form the Sheffield Sports Commentaries Committee for hospital patients and the blind, and has himself relayed many messages in addition to raising money for its operation. He is on a number of hospital committees and has set an example by donating blood, giving his first pint in 1942, and continuing until he had given 50, when he received the gold medal.

Mr Silver's interest in synagogue affairs dates back many years: he held office in the Central Hebrew Congregation almost 40 years ago, holding office as president when the two synagogues amalgamated in 1951. Since 1954 he has been a vice-president of the United Hebrew Congregation.

His other communal interests have included the Order of Ancient Maccabees, to which he was elected life vice-commander, and the Federation of Kosher Meat Traders, of which he is vice-president.

Memorial plaques will go

From our Correspondent—Manchester

Not all of the private memorial plaques on the walls of the synagogue at the Jewish aged home in Cheetham Hill Road, which is to be demolished, will be replaced in Henthlands, the new home in Prestwich to be opened later this year.

Plaques put up since 1963 will be guaranteed a place, but those dedicated before then will be restored only if relatives pay an extra £25—the difference between the old fee and the present £50. Otherwise, the names will be inscribed in an illuminated book which will be kept in an annexe of the synagogue to be known as the memorial hall.

The new arrangement was outlined by Mr Sidney Hamburger, the president of the Manchester Jewish Homes for the Aged, at the annual meeting held at the Leicester Road home last week. The practice of naming beds after individuals and organisations would also be discontinued, said Mr Hamburger. It was not thought that the name over a bed contributed anything to the welfare of the occupant. Naming of wards would, however, be continued.

The burden of supporting the community's aged and infirm would now fall on another generation and in another location, Mr Hamburger told the meeting. He stated that there was an obligation by children, wherever possible, to contribute towards the maintenance of parents. Although the homes planned for one-twelve residents as paying guests the number at present was below that figure.

Turf cut

A turf-cutting ceremony for the new Manchester Yeshiva was held on Sunday at the site in Seymour Road, Crumpsall.

Mr Saul Rosenberg, the president of the yeshiva, thanked all who had donated money so that the £110,000 scheme could go ahead, but reminded the community that £40,000 had still to be found.

The 20-minute ceremony started with a psalm recited by Dayan I. Golditch, head of the Manchester Beth Din, and ended with another by Dayan M. Schneebalg, of the Machzikei Hadass.

Feast of music at sea

A musical feast afloat with the participation of outstanding artists is being offered by Paquet Cruises (French Line) are the British agents. This, the fourth annual Festival of Music aboard the hand-some liner Renaissance, takes place between September 2 and 15, but participants can, without additional charge, join the ship at Le Havre on September 1. Cruise rates range from £260 and ports of call include Vigo, Malaga, Tunis, Malta, Delphi, Dubrovnik and Venice. Concerts will be given on shore and at sea.

Artists participating in the Festival include Menuhin, Barenboim, Jacqueline Dupre, Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, Henryk Szeryng and Pinchas Zukerman. I can recommend the Renaissance highly. She is an elegant, modern cutter with excellent accommodation (all but eight of the 213 staterooms are outside), beautiful lounge and two heated swimming pools.

Hong Kong fares

BOAC has introduced a London-Hong Kong return fare for only £190, a reduction of more than £100 on the present economy excursion fare. It will be an "Early-bird" pay-now-later fare, similar to those successfully introduced by BOAC to and from the Caribbean, the Bahamas and Bermuda.

The £190 fare will be available from June for a stay of 10 to 45 days. Passengers travelling after August have to pay the full fare at least four months ahead. Although refunds are not allowed, passengers can insure against cancellation through, for example, illness.

Farther, one of the leading travel agents in the Manchester area, has issued a new brochure listing inclusive holidays in nearly 50 countries. This is in addition to its programme of kosher holidays in European centres like Italy and Greece, to Miami Beach with accommodation at the Curillon or Sans Souci hotels or the kosher Sterling. Israel holidays appear in the general brochure, rates for a fortnight's package starting from £110.

Cut cruise rates

There's still time for late-bookers to take advantage of Cunard's "Gangplank Fare" scheme giving big reductions on cruise rates in the Caribbean. You can save 20 per cent on advertised rates by paying your reduced fare in advance. The scheme applies to Carmania's cruises from Southampton on June 4, 18 and July 2. The first cruise is to Lisbon, Casablanca, Las Palmas, Madeira, Gibraltar and Vigo (reduced fare is £112); the second, to Tangier, Ajaccio, Livorno and Lisbon (reduced rate £100); and the July cruise is to Lisbon, Cannes, Palma and Ceuta (cut rate is £100).

Teacher training plea in Glasgow

A plea for the establishment of a non-sectarian teachers' training college was made by Dr Stefan Reif, speaking at a symposium on Jewish education held in the Queens Park synagogue hall, Glasgow, last week.

Dr Reif, a lecturer in modern Hebrew at the department of Hebrew and semitic languages at Glasgow University and principal of the Glasgow Hebrew College, attributed some of the failures in Jewish education to the different approaches to teacher training adopted by Jews' College, Gateshead, and the Reform movement.

He saw a tendency in certain areas to want to dictate Jewish education, to want to say what was right and what was wrong in Jewish education, and exclude from those areas people who had different views on the subject. A rabbi,

Jewish scholar, reader, shochet or mohel was not necessarily a good Jewish teacher, said Dr Reif. If they accepted that a good Hebrew teacher was a good educationalist they could begin to make some changes.

Other speakers on the panel were Dr Isidore Fishman, director of the London Board of Jewish Religious Education, Mr Moshe Davis, director of the JNF education department, and Mrs Pauline Gaba, headmistress of Calderwood Lodge School. Dayan Dr Wolf Gottlieb presided.

The freedom of the City of Glasgow is to be conferred on Sir Isaac Wolfson at a ceremony in the City Chambers next Wednesday. A banquet to mark the occasion is to be held by the Glasgow Jewish Representative Council.

Birmingham's protest march

From our Correspondent

Three hundred Birmingham Jews staged a silent march of protest through the streets of the city last week as an expression of their horror at the treatment of their coreligionists in the Soviet Union.

The route of the march, which had been organised by the Representative Council of Birmingham and Midland Jewry, ran from Singers Hill Synagogue through the town centre to the theatre at which the Red Army Ensemble was appearing.

Banner-carrying marchers stood outside the entrance to the theatre and leaflets were distributed to those entering. It is understood that the theatre was half empty.

The marchers included ministers from all of Birmingham's Orthodox synagogues as well as the rabbi of the Progressive synagogue.

Israelis prefer Irish meat

From our Correspondent Dublin

Kosher meat from Ireland is finding increasing favour with Israeli consumers.

At first sales were slow because the public have been accustomed to the leaner, tougher meat from the Argentine and other countries, but now that they have tasted the Irish, they like it better than any other.

This emerged during a visit to Dublin last week by Rabbi Shimon Efrati, head of the kashrut department of the Israeli rabbinate. He was on a tour of inspection of the shechita arrangements in connection with the export of kosher meat to Israel, under the joint certification of Rabbi Efrati's department and the Chief Rabbi of Ireland.

A record £1,000 was raised when the Dublin Huldah Zionist Group held their annual fashion show. A young German, Thomas Wolfangol, showed his haute couture collection.

Blackpool seminar

From a Correspondent

The Israel Committee of Reform Synagogues of Great Britain held a week-end seminar at the Warwick Hotel, Blackpool, which was attended by more than 50 participants.

Rabbi Uri Thermal, of the Sinai Synagogue, Leeds, Rabbi Hillel Avitan, of Glasgow New Synagogue, Mr Wolf Perry, former world deputy chairman of Keren Hayesod in Jerusalem, Sir Karl Cohen, national vice-president of Poale Zion, and Mr Martin Shaw, chairman of the Israel Committee, were the speakers.

Southend youths bowl all night

While 120 teenagers danced through the night at the bowling alley discotheque on Southend Pier on Saturday, 20 of their colleagues from the Weltmann Society were participating in a marathon bowling session in the rinks below the hall.

The sponsored non-stop bowling, together with the dance raised £280 towards the youth village in Ashkelon.

Immortal

Sir Isaac Wolfson appears to have passed into legend.

The story used to be told of a poor man who came to Rothschild and offered to confide the secret of eternal life for £1,000. Rothschild, amused, asked for the secret. "You just come and live in Schnippschock. In all history no rich man has ever died there."

Dr. Tom Honeyman, a former director of the Glasgow Art Gallery, tells the same story in his newly published memoirs "Art and Audacity," but instead of Schnippschock he has the Gorbals, and instead of Rothschild he has Sir Isaac.

In the course of the next twenty years, Tony returned on several occasions to direct at the Habimah.

Cheeky Chaim

A new and riotously funny novel has just appeared. Called "Now Downer," it is set in an unnamed garden suburb and features, among others, the unnamed rabbi of an unnamed synagogue, an unnamed Chief Rabbi, and the unnamed Dayanim of an unnamed Beth Din.

I can, however, name the author, Chaim Bernum. He is already defending one libel suit, and if he is not careful he may find himself defending several more.

Her many friends would certainly agree with this judgement, for Mrs. Levy, the wife of a local doctor, is possibly the busiest woman communal figure. Her interests encompass the Zionist Federation, the WJC, the Labour Friends of Israel and other organisations.

Congratulations, too, to my friend and colleague, Mr. Alfred Sherman, apart from writing for the "JC" he is London correspondent of Haaretz. He has been elected as a Conservative councillor in the Royal borough of Kensington.

Charles Landstone, the "JC's" former drama critic, tells me that he had the honour to work with Tony managerially for a decade, and took the chair at the Anglo-Palestine Club in 1947, where Tony kept the audience in hysterical laughter with the story of his adventures in Tel Aviv, while producing "Oedipus Rex" for Habimah.

He subsequently detailed the story in his autobiography, "A Life in the Theatre," and it makes hilarious reading. The production took place at the height of the "troubles," and Sir Tyrone and his wife had to sign a paper acknowledging that they realised that the British Government accepted no responsibility for them. Every day, escorted by young men of the Irgun Zvai Leumi, the Guthries were driven to and from rehearsals in a hearse, this being the only conveyance allowed in the streets during the curfew.

In the course of the next twenty years, Tony returned on several occasions to direct at the Habimah.

He is an old hand at broadcasting, with nine years' experience at the BBC. Radio 2 listeners might remember his recent programme about the American Jewish singer, Al Jolson. Mr. Freedland ran a 13-week series speaking to famous song-writers. More important still — he is one of the "JC's" family of correspondents.

"We knew our new neighbours were Scottish, our Bradford correspondent tells me. We also knew our children were not conversant with Scottish names, but we were still amazed when our eight-year-old proudly announced that his special friend was called 'Haim-lah.'"

His reply was that there was a young man on the council — in fact he was chairman of the burial committee!

JEWISH CHRONICLE

MAY 21, 1971—IYAR 26, 5731

Renewed pressure on Israel

IT IS MUCH TOO SOON to assess President Sadat's seizure of total power in Egypt. Talk of a more "liberal" era in that country seems premature, for the old adage remains true that violence breeds violence, and though Sadat has obviously strengthened his immediate position, there is no guarantee that he will not be toppled by another coup in the months ahead.

Egypt's President has shown himself strong enough to replace Nasser's men by his own. He has indicated more intelligent economic policies and has at least talked of the possibility of a peace agreement with Israel. He has in addition opened a dialogue with the United States Government, which might be an indication of his unwillingness to depend totally on the Soviet Union.

But it is at least possible that all his actions may simply be part of the internal struggle for power in Egypt. The dialogue with the United States is certainly intended to promote American pressure on Israel to make the maximum concessions to Egypt. In the same way, the talk of a peace agreement with Israel may simply be a piece of diplomatic maneuvering.

The outside world has in the past shown an astonishing gullibility in assuming changes for the better when a Middle East country has been in ferment. Nasser was credited with bringing "Socialism" to Egypt, when he was laying the foundations of absolute dictatorship. King Hussein was popularly supposed to be giving the Palestinians a share of power when he was in fact preparing for their disintegration. One Syrian régime after another has been acclaimed as an improvement on the previous one. And now the adjectives being applied to Sadat are "moderate" and "liberal," when there is no real indication that he will be either of these things.

Whenever there is such a change in the Middle East and it is generally erroneously assumed to be a change in favour of moderation, Israel is invariably invited to make "concessions" in order to support the new régime and to avoid its replacement by a worse one. The same argument is now being advanced that Israel should do something to strengthen Sadat in order to avoid his replacement by someone worse.

As on so many other occasions, Israel is being asked to give away something of substance in return for a will of the wisp. So far, all that Sadat has done is to suggest that he might move towards a more constructive diplomacy. Israel cannot be expected to pay for this in advance. When Sadat shows his readiness for realistic negotiations with Israel, be it about peace generally or a more limited objective like the reopening of the Suez Canal, Israel should, and undoubtedly will, respond in a statesmanlike and constructive fashion. But if the intention of Egyptian policy is to gain advantages to strengthen her in a future war against Israel, she can expect no aid from her intended victim. Israel should not be hustled or bullied into making premature concessions, which would only weaken her position and not serve the cause of real peace.

Needless violence

According to a report from our own correspondent elsewhere in this issue, the Jerusalem police appear to have made an unnecessarily violent attack on a peaceful demonstration by Israeli citizens calling themselves "Black Panthers." This is so out of keeping with Israel's democratic image as to call for comment. The demonstration may well have been technically illegal, but it was not riotous. The authorities were entitled to disperse it, though common sense would have dictated some degree of latitude. Whether one agrees with the ideas or methods of the "Black Panthers" is immaterial. There are serious ethnic problems in Israel and groups like the "Black Panthers" are bound to arise at intervals. So long as they observe the law, they have a right to the same treatment as is accorded to all other groups. If it is thought that, unlike religious zealots or militant trade union groups, the ethnic demonstrators are being harshly dealt with, grievances and disaffection will grow.

Counter-productive

The European Economic Community is political as well as economic. Britain's entry will inevitably have political overtones in general and negotiations for Middle East peace in particular. By and large, judging by that reports are available of the Secretary's meeting with the Ministers of the Six, Britain's policy move marginally closer on Middle East affairs to that of Europe, which in case means France. In so far as it has any effect at all, it will be a hindrance. The desire for peace in the Middle East is a wholly worthy one, but the policy adopted by France and now Europe would be counter-productive. So long as Egypt and the other Governments feel that by using political and economic opportunities they can persuade other countries to bring pressure on Israel, they are inclined they will be to take a view of the situation.

Truth, not Tass

The trial of Jews in Leningrad effectively held in secret, and the report emanated from Tass, the Soviet news agency. Anyone who followed Tass reporting over the years and compared it either with known or subsequent Soviet admissions and closures will know that Tass follows the dictum that "truth suits the interests of the working class." So far as can be ascertained from secondary sources — and the truth inevitably finds its way out sooner or later — the Tass reports are completely at variance with what is taking place. If the Russians did have concrete evidence against the accused, they would not have hesitated to throw the case open to the world. As it is, a pretension is created of a travesty of justice against Jews for remaining true to their people and culture.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Co-ordinating welfare work Liberal policy Immigration Bill furore

Sir,—I have noted with pleasure the reports and comments in the Jewish Chronicle with regard to the co-ordination of welfare activities within the community. The discussions to which you have referred are in their earliest stages but it may be of interest for me to set out the general principles on which the Jewish Welfare Board's initiative have been based. Experience both within the community and outside it have increasingly shown that the categories into which welfare work have been divided hitherto are no longer valid. For example, to treat the blind or the deaf separately from the sighted and those that can hear is probably not in the interests of either group. The problem of a child can seldom be divorced from the many welfare problems relating to the rest of the family.

Ben Azai drew attention to the obvious economic advantages to be derived from centralised administration, but wondered whether the staff of the right calibre could be recruited to cope with a "vast organisation." The whole question of staff is vital. The days are past when welfare workers were paid a miserable salary on the grounds that theirs was not a job but a vocation.

Today, staff require responsibility, good wages and good prospects of promotion. The community has to compete with comparable jobs in the social services. Only a "vast organisation" can offer the type of job to which the experienced and qualified social worker will today be attracted.

The economics of centralisation are likely to be considerable, but far greater will be the advantages of pooling the experience of all charities in their financial negotiations with local authorities. Up until very recently I estimate that by failing to do this the community has been wasting not less than £100,000 per annum.

forward would in no way impinge on the separate identity of long-established welfare organisations, nor would they interfere at all with their fund-raising activities. The partnership between voluntary workers and professionals would be preserved and strengthened and the individuality of different homes and the personal involvement of so many people in providing amenities and ensuring the happiness of the residents would remain unaffected.

The purpose is to ensure that the community's welfare needs are effectively, economically and comprehensively met.

ROLAND A. E. FRANKLIN,
chairman, Jewish Welfare Board,

Norwood

Sir,—Ben Azai referred in your May 14 issue to the "successful amalgamation of the Jewish Welfare Board and Norwood."

These organisations have not amalgamated. The facts are that in 1964 it was felt that there was a considerable amount of overlapping between both bodies in so far as the work for children and young people was concerned and it was then decided that the responsibility for their residential care and welfare should be undertaken solely by Norwood who meet the financial cost involved.

The confusion may possibly have arisen because Norwood occupy offices in the board's headquarters and make use of some administrative services for which they pay an annual fee.

I should add that Norwood remains an autonomous body and continues the work which it has done for more than 170 years.

Sir,—It is said that Mr Cyril Carr, vice-chairman of the Liberal Party, has not understood my letter in your April 30 issue.

It made three basic points: first that the leadership of the party rejected outspokenly the policies of the leaders of the Young Liberals in relation to Israel; secondly that Jews in the Liberal Party were not, in public at least, playing their part; and thirdly that the Young Liberals had penetrated the Liberal hierarchy in strength.

Mr Carr seems to have read into my letter an inference of anti-semitism in the Liberal Party, which I did not imply—other than to draw attention to remarks by Mr Louis Eaks which could well be construed as antisemitic and which the Liberal Party council had failed to act upon.

Readers of Mr Carr's letter can only come to the same conclusion as myself—that Jews in the Liberal Party are more concerned with a defensive rather than an aggressive attitude towards this problem; that it is "rocking the boat" to criticise the party in public (and this includes Mr Eaks); and that it is more important to quibble about my statistics as to how big a handful of Jews there may or may not be in the upper echelons than to reply to the politically-uninformed letter in the Jewish Chronicle from Mr Hebditch of the Young Liberals.

Name of a lane—in your April 2 issue I noticed an advertisement with the address Steeles Lane, E1. Being of the same name, I am interested to learn of its origin and of any family details.—M. Steeds, PO Box 59283, Sakonwold, Transvaal, South Africa.

Spastic seeds wheelechairs—Would anyone who may have a strong opinion on the subject of "spastic seeds" please write to the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, 10, Abchurch Lane, London EC4N 3DF, or to the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, 10, Abchurch Lane, London EC4N 3DF.

Sir,—Mr Hayim Pinner's concern (your May 14 issue) that the "paternal" clause in the Immigration Bill would endanger Jewish aliyah to England is a reminder that there is something amiss in the liaison between Israel and this country and that some Zionist leaders have forgotten the basic principles of Zionism.

Mr Pinner and Dr Levenberg (your March 28 issue), have both attacked the Immigration Bill because it would rob some 400,000 Jews now living in the Commonwealth of the possibility of aliyah to England. Unfortunately, they overlooked several important implications.

Zionism, the Balfour Declaration and the present laws of immigration of the State of Israel derive their moral and legal validity from the "paternal" principle, namely that we Jews have an inviolable right to return to the land of our forefathers.

Hence, if it was morally right for a British Government to issue the Balfour Declaration, which gave international recognition to this basic right, why should it be wrong of another British Government to grant similar preferential rights to British people with regard to Britain?

And what about the "paternal" principle which governs the immigration and marriage laws of the State of Israel?

In July, 1962, Dr Herzl appeared as an expert witness before the Royal Commission on Alien Immigration. He warned them that mass Jewish immigration would create antisemitism in this country. He therefore advocated the creation of a Jewish State to which Jewish immigrants would be diverted.

Dr Weismann in his autobiography, "Trial and Error," wrote that Sir Evans Gordon (the Baroness of the anti-immigration agitation early in this century) was not an antisemite and that though lively very small at the time, "England had reached the point when she could or would no longer take so many Jews and no more" (Illustrated edition, page 111).

The strange irony is that as before the creation of the State of Israel the British Government was often criticised for restricting Jewish immigration into Palestine. Now, after the creation of the State, the British Government is criticised for not facilitating Jewish immigration into England!

'No crisis' at Carmel

Sir,—Concerning the Carmel College by your correspondent in your issue, I would make the following observations:

(1) There is no crisis at the school.
(2) There is no real problem.
(3) No teachers are out. I have been speaking to the senior master that all accept the government's offer and will support him.

(4) I have received from the students 300 signatures confirming their support for the school.
(5) There are no real problems involved with the school. Following the letter from Mr Azai and his colleagues, I understand fully and sympathetically with the apprehensions of the students and the school. I am sure that the school will be able to overcome all difficulties and continue to provide a high standard of education for its students.

The bottled up business.

You know the signs. Up-tight and cramped for space, a full order book and more coming in. You have to expand. You need to grow. So why not take a long hard look at Peterborough. It has a great deal to offer.

You will find a thriving industrial centre launched on a £330 million expansion programme. Excellent factory sites on long term leases. Advance factories available now from 3,000 to 12,000 sq. ft. (linkable to give up to 25,000 square feet). Or we can design and build a factory to fit your specific requirements.

There is a settled work force, strong in industrial skills. 20,000 of them in engineering. The total labour force will be doubled by 1985 as Peterborough grows by another 100,000. Houses are available now for your employees.

Greater Peterborough, developing into the new regional capital city of the 1980's, offers an excellent growth potential. A place of space. A place to grow. Unbottle a great future and write to:

Bletchley: a case study

C. M. MURPHY
editor, Official Architecture & Planning

TOWN development policies have been pursued so vigorously in Bletchley, Bucks, since 1950 that scope for further expansion within the area of the urban district council must now be regarded as comparatively limited. Yet, even as the final phases of the big housing and industrial programme take shape, a new era of expansion is emerging.

areas of co-operation and collaboration.

Bletchley is near to fulfilling its original aims; now as part of the new city its horizons have broadened further, and the future promises to be as thrilling as the last 20 years.

Like all the successful expanded towns, Bletchley owes much to a progressive council and the opportunities offered by the Town Development Act, 1952. The post-war mood was for a "bigger, better, brighter Bletchley," and when the new planning powers came in 1952, Bletchley was quickly off the mark. So quickly, indeed, that the Act had to be back-dated to legalise some of the things which Bletchley had already done.

From a population of 10,500 in 1950, the town has grown to accommodate the target of 40,000 by 1980. The rateable value of the town in 1950 was £21,500; in 1980 it was £1,650,000. The general figure spells out clearly the programme of expansion meant to the inhabitants of the town. In 1952 it was last year, despite the limitation of the area, the town with all its amenities and vast property values, the rate was 12s. 11d.

The reality behind the lies, of course, in the attraction of industry in the area. More than 50 firms already moved in to take advantage of the modern, purpose-built factories. The of manufacturing industry in London has been encouraged since at around £550 an acre, satisfied and stable work (usually "imported" by

Historic Norwich — to be carefully preserved as population swells to a third of a million by the turn of the century firms) and a strategic location on the main routes between London and the north.

There is easy access to the M1 (1½ hours to London), the main A5 trunk road and a fast rail service to London. The firms involved range from small development companies to international concerns.

For the employees, predominantly London "overspill" workers who have moved with the job from decaying parts of London, the attractions are better working and living conditions. The availability of modern housing is a major incentive, and the delicate balance in phasing new housing with new industry has been managed with a rare degree of skill.

Bletchley officials are quick to pay tribute to the GLC and the appropriate Government departments for their co-operation, but credit in this tricky liaison work must also go to Bletchley itself.

The influx from London does not seem to have produced any social tensions in a town so wholeheartedly behind the expansionist policies.

There is a positive policy of making newcomers welcome. The council estates have their own local shopping centres, and most have some kind of community hall available, so that a sense of identity among people of a common background is preserved. Most of the council housing is of the three-bedroom, semi-detached type; Bletchley has only one high-rise block of flats, the 18-storey Melish Court. While other expanded towns are now feeling the industrial pinch, leaving them with an embarrassment of empty houses on their hands, Bletchley claims that it has only sufficient for immediate needs.

Private housing has been provided 50-50 with council developments. A three-bedroom semi-detached with integral garage and central heating costs around £25,500, which must seem a snip to those reared on London property values. One of the by-products of the town's magnetism is the steady increase in values, currently running at 10 per cent a year.

The East Anglia Economic Planning Council in its 1968 report recommended the development of "city regions" as the natural and most beneficial form of growth for East Anglia, together with the three "town regions" of King's Lynn, Great Yarmouth/Lowestoft and Bury St. Edmunds and a few minor growth points.

Smaller towns, such as King's Lynn, Bury St. Edmunds, and Haverhill, are benefiting from planned immigration of people and industry from London.

The East Anglia Consultative Committee composed of the eight local planning authorities is preparing a strategic plan which will represent a rationalisation of the declared aims of the individual authorities, which allows for the growth of the four main centres and which includes a study of the county towns as to their relative suitability as minor growth points.

There are a number of general obstacles to be overcome. The system of communications is inadequate. Public investment programmes must be expanded to make up existing deficiencies and the demands arising from population increase are proportionally much greater than the national average.

The population of the Norwich "city region" is assessed at about 225,000, which increases at about 2,500 per year. It is expected that by the turn of the century the population will have grown to about one-third of a million.

Employment has grown by 20 per cent between 1955 and 1966 an average of nearly 1,500 per annum. Ninety per cent of the recent growth in employment has been in services.

The Cambridge "city region" has a total population of about 170,000. Increases in population and employment have been continuous.

The Ipswich "city region" (population over 200,000) is a leading regional centre, industrial town and port. Population trends would lead Ipswich itself to increase from its present 120,000 to about 140,000 by 1981 and to about 160,000 by 2001.

The population of Peterborough sub-region is something over 100,000 with a planned expansion of 70,000 people by 1981.

There appear to be two courses open to East Anglia in shaping its future:

(1) To encourage growth and investment on a scale sufficient to bring the desired standard of material wealth, greater opportunity and the benefits of a modern urban society. It seems that this can only be achieved at the expense of the present East Anglian way of life.

(2) East Anglia could have a future as a national recreation area or as a water storage area, or even as a commuting area. Any or all of these would not destroy the rural character of the region.

What Plymouth offers the Industrialist

Plymouth is naturally an attractive city for industrial development. Labour relations are exceptionally good and specialist labour can easily be attracted to such a pleasant area. Already 27 new factories have been built, providing employment for 12,000 people, and others are under construction.

Regional and Government policy is that Plymouth shall be the growth point for this part of the South-West Region, and to this end, Plymouth has been made an Intermediate Area, which results in the following financial assistance to industry:

- (a) building grants of 25 per cent. (up to 35 per cent. in certain circumstances);
- (b) full range of training grants;
- (c) help towards the cost of moving key personnel;
- (d) freely available Industrial Development Certificates.

Move your factory to King's Lynn

on the threshold of Europe

King's Lynn is an expanding town with modern factories at low rents and plentiful cheap land for purpose built projects.

Communications with London and the Midlands are good. And the thriving port has regular roll-on/roll-off and container sailings to Europe. Labour is in good supply. And there are new homes and good social amenities for the Londoners that move with their firms. As well as beautiful countryside and wide sandy beaches nearby. ### Malice aforethought

JAMES PARKES

PEACE IN THE HOLY LAND: An Historical Analysis of the Palestine Problem. By John Bagot Glubb (Glubb Pasha). Hodder & Stoughton. £3.15.

This is a very sad review to write. Like many others concerned with all aspects of the Middle East, I have an immense respect for the dignity, forgiveness and humility with which Sir John faced the abrupt termination of his long and honourable service in Jordan. He insists again and again in this study that he writes explicitly as a Christian, and I am grateful to a Christian to review it. For, in spite of his sincere desire to be objective and sympathetic, he offers his readers an unbelievable travesty of Jewish history.

Abraham is dismissed as "a donkey bedouin," who believed he had been inspired but had no link with anything more spiritual than a primitive tribalism. It is constantly explained that the Jewish people are only to a limited extent his descendants, and, in any case, the God of the universe chooses His servants anywhere and has no chosen people.

So too, the chapter dealing with the period of the great prophets is headed "Decline and decadence," and they are dismissed as a group of "revivalists" such as occurs anywhere. I am not sure what, on Sir John's estimate of Israelite history, they were to "revive." In them, almost for the first time, we find genuine moral issues, but they are only of importance to us provided we dismiss completely any idea that God had any special concern with their people.

Exra has similarly to be dismissed. His introduction of national religious education, his relation to the emergence of an open public worship without tabus, his contribution to the creation and use of sacred scriptures, all this is too unimportant to mention.

"The principal emphasis of his reform was on the prohibition of intermarriage between Jews and the rest of humanity" (p. 92, repeated on p. 105). He deliberately ignores the repeated statement in the Bible which links the question of intermarriage exclusively to the idolatry of the non-Jewish partner, and pretends that Ezra adopted a purely Nazi policy of "blood and race."

To come to modern times, Sir John must be assumed to know his facts, and his silences can only be deliberate. The most astonishing silence is that which pretends that no Arab action was taken against the Jews in Palestine until after the Mandate had terminated. The official Arab rejection of partition in November 1947, the threats of Azzam Pasha, the activities of Kawajik—all this is conveniently forgotten. Deir Yassin is, of course, underlined, but the Scopus and Kfar Etzion massacres are not mentioned. Begin is referred to again and again, as though he was officially head of Zionism.

In the wide and unhappy story of contemporary political controversies, the European and American pro-Arabs constitute a unique group. I know no other field in which the whole emphasis is confined to abuse of the other side, and the deliberate incultation of hatred.

Englishmen were pro-Nigerian or pro-Biafran. Today they will be supporting West or East Pakistan. In the Nigerian tragedy I do not remember that either side concentrated on urging us to hate the other. I doubt if they will do so in the present Pakistan tragedy. But in the Middle East the pro-Arabs never stop issuing their hate propaganda concerning Israel.

I am deeply distressed that Sir John Glubb, whose writings have hitherto been unique in their objective exposition of Arab history, should have written such a survey of Jewish history as this book. It will not help to make peace in the Holy Land.

MISCELLANY

A Tale of Three Cities, by Ernst Roth (Cassell, £2.10). The author spent the first half of his life in Prague and Vienna. In his novel, a memoir of the Austro-Hungarian Empire he disentangles the distinguishing features of Vienna, Budapest and Prague. He credits the Jewish families of Prague with cultivating the "blue flower of German romanticism which had long since withered in German lands."

New Targets for Israel, by Arlo L. Blay (Lavin, £2.10). The author, an old China hand recently released after 20 months in a Chinese prison, assesses Mao's political and military aims—dominance in the Communist world even at the risk of a nuclear war with the Soviet Union; defeat of the capitalist powers through perpetual wars in South-East Asia and the Middle East, where China is providing strong military and financial support to the Palestinian Liberation Organisation through Iraq.

A History of Song, edited by Denis Stevens (Hutchinson, £3.75; £1.50 in paperback). Gerald Abraham, Gillian Chase, David Cox, the Jewry, Omotowa, Jacob and Michael Tipper were part of the expert team which traced the development of the art of song in Europe and America from the first troubadours to the twentieth century. This important survey first published in 1960.

Playwright 45: "a Maaboth" by Charles Marowitz (Gilder & Boyars, £1.50). Another in the experimental play series, with an introduction by Marowitz, which explains his freely adapted version of the Shakespearean tragedy. The play is a study in wit, and Marowitz's version is a study in wit.

"Moses holding the tablets of the Law." Part of a window in Notre Dame, of Paris (circa 1250 C.E.) from "The Horned Moses in Medieval Art and Thought," by Ruth Mellinkoff (University of California, £7.85). This extensively illustrated and scholarly work maintains that the horns symbolised strength and honour rather than a medieval demonism.

Kehilla experiment

JACK WINO

NEW YORK JEWS AND THE QUEST FOR COMMUNITY. By Arthur A. Conelabio. Columbia University Press. £4.50.

Mr Goren has made a notable contribution to twentieth-century Jewish historical studies with his examination of the stormy origins, chequered life and precipitate decline of the attempt to establish a kehilla—an organised structured community—among New York Jewry in the period between 1908 and 1922, when the experiment eventually collapsed.

The kehilla, which was so successful in other less libertarian and socially mobile societies, as for example in Argentina, originally came into existence with the benison and background leadership of the older German Jewish community, which had already created the prestigious American Jewish Committee. It was intended to harness the undisciplined energies of the more recent immigrant community downtown. In the event, the masses or their representatives, with the exception of the powerful and suspicious Jewish labour movement, took over. Finally, the kehilla broke up on the rocks of conflict between social classes, religious feuds, and the struggle between Zionists and non- or anti-Zionists in the early 1920s.

In its heyday, the kehilla had originated as an agency to combat a particularly virulent play of antisemitism by the Police Commissioner. The Police Commissioner (who had alleged) $2.28 million. Investors poured per cent of the city's $1,089.97 million into the society in the first three months. Withdrawals totalled $108.69 million leaving a net inflow of $98.28 million—a fare and the war against $2.28 million. From this actually ran its own $1.5 million mortgage advances to £115.02 million from a corresponding $80.52 million and raiding their hands of $1.5 million.

Mr Goren provides many insights into the public life of the kehilla. Substantial figures as in the case of Jacob Schiff and Louis M. Magnus was the first leader of the kehilla because he was a force of personality and able to bridge the gap between downtown masses and the elite.

The kehilla which began to hang round the life with a substantial income, came to be a new generation of the Jewry, anxious to play a role in the national scene.

FINANCE AND INDUSTRY

Modest retreat is a good sign

By our City Editor

The Common Market developments together with fears about the Government's "competitive complex" have combined to slow down the rise in shares. But the undertone remains firm.

Activity in the market remains high, despite the ungainly interventions of Mr John Davies with his comments about lifting foreign vehicle import tariffs.

The uncertainty of whether Mr Davies intends to introduce such legislation has obviously undermined confidence in not only the leading UK export industry but also in the stock market, where it is feared Mr Davies may upset other industries with similar innovations to make them more "competitive."

At the same time the uncertainties of the Common Market talks are unsettling. It is a comfort, therefore, to find the market retreating only modestly in the face of what previously would have been disastrous turns of events. It augurs well for the current market strength.

The first quarter has produced another period of growth at the mighty Halifax Building Society, where assets climbed to a new peak of £2,077.04 million—a rise of £22.28 million. Investors poured per cent of the city's $1,089.97 million into the society in the first three months. The 1970/71 year was another period of intensive growth at Marks & Spencer with interesting new developments in merchandise and stores. The largest ever increase in selling space was achieved.

Mr J. Edward Sieff, the chairman of M & S, also reveals that the upsurge in sales to £410.08 million was achieved.

BUSINESS AFFAIRS

Mr G. M. Abrahams, chairman of Aqueductum, is not prepared to predict what will be the likely outcome of 1971. But he looks forward with confidence to greater achievements and says indications are that 1972 will begin to see an improvement in trading generally.

"Benefits are still to be realised from further rationalisation and improved management techniques," says Mr Murray Gordon, chairman of Combined English Stores. In addition he says his optimism regarding long-term prospects is soundly based on developments and planned organic expansion now in hand.

Mr Malcolm Horsman, chairman of Rull International, revealed at the annual meeting that a "very promising start" had been made to the current year. He sees 1971 as a year of further expansion.

The Land Securities property portfolio has been revalued to not less than £878 million which means a net asset value of 190p per share.

Dividend total at Selincourt is being restored to 15 per cent with a 10 per cent final. Trading profits for the twelve months ended January 31, 1971, beat the forecast £750,000 at £817,000 against £750,000 and turnover and profits in the first three months of the present year are higher than the comparable period a year ago.

Mr M. K. Rose reports a good start to the year at House of Le-ruse, with all the group's products in greater demand than ever. In Holland the "Elvi" offshoot is almost sold out to the end of the year and order books are at record levels.

Mr Geoffrey Kaye, chairman and managing director of Pricerite, is convinced that the reorganisation programme currently under way is the right one to ensure future profit growth.

Mr Alfred Solomon has been appointed to the board of Northern Commercial Trust, the Manchester-based bankers. Mr Solomon was formerly the London local director of the Swiss-Israeli trade Bank.

DALTON BARTON 1970

From the Chairman's Report:

I am pleased to report a year of high performance, expansion and achievement.

We have found an increasing demand for our services and all sectors of the Group's activities have expanded to meet the calls made upon them.

Developments in 1971

The first quarter of 1971 has seen an encouraging maintenance of our growth.

1. In February 1971 we set up a property company, Lincroft Securities Limited. We have already purchased an office block for over £1,000,000 and discussions covering other substantial properties are in progress.

2. Dalton, Barton (Scotland) Limited was also established in February. The conclusion that we could make a significant contribution to the prosperity of the Scottish industrial and commercial community has been confirmed.

by the support of a number of leading funds and institutions who have agreed to become shareholders in the enterprise.

3. We have formed Dalbar Leasing Limited. We see leasing as a growth business where our organisation and daily experience provide us with special opportunities.

4. Many of the provisions which the Chancellor has introduced in his recent March budget will greatly encourage the atmosphere of expansion in which our business thrives.

New projects and opportunities have already presented themselves and our specialist activities are well geared to meet demand from those sectors where we foresee growth or the need for selective but concentrated effort.

I am therefore optimistic for the continuing and sustained prosperity of Dalton, Barton.

'We shall not rest until she is free'

says DOREEN GAINSFORD pictured, left, outside the Russian Embassy, one of the thirty-five 35-year-old women who demonstrated for the release of RAIZA PALATNIK.

I can go to the hairdresser tomorrow... As a 35-year-old Jewess living in Britain, I find it difficult to believe that my counterpart in Russia may not have the opportunity of saying, "Please excuse me from supporting today's meeting on emigrating to Israel because I have a hair appointment."

The fact that my counterpart in Russia, if involved in wanting to be a practising Jew, wants to live in Israel, puts her under the eyes of the KGB (Soviet security police) and places one foot in prison. She does not know what will happen to her tomorrow, let alone a hair appointment.

As a young child I heard about the Gestapo and the six million. In my teens and twenties I openly criticised the older generation for sitting down and not fighting with everything they had for those six million. Now I find myself faced with nearly three million—this time in another country—but nevertheless in peril.

My forefathers left Russia, otherwise I could be one of those three million and would need the help of fellow Jews living in the free world.

You may say how can I, a mere housewife, interfere in the politics of another country — a country about which I cannot even be sure of my facts? Violence is discounted. The only weapon I possess is my tongue.

My fellow Jews fall into several categories. Those who say, "We must act now, this minute, let the kids have fish fingers for lunch instead of a well-cooked meal. I will not be guilty by neglect." Those who say, "I should love to help, but maybe next week when I make arrangements."

We must fight

There are those who say, "What good will my shouting do? No government is going to take notice of me," and those who say, "I am sorry, but I have my own problems." To those I say if every Jew had actively worked for the six million, the criminal slaughter might never have happened.

Right now, the Leningrad trials are on. Next is Riga and so on and so on. One of the four young people to be tried in Riga is a 23-year-old girl who has already served a 9-month sentence — because she has said what we here can say freely: "I want to be Jewish and as I cannot be the sort of Jew I wish to be in the Soviet Union, please let me go to Israel." Is this a crime? I can not sit back and watch this happening. Today I must fight.

We need help

I am a representative of 35 women who have effectively demonstrated for Raiza Palatnik, a 35-year-old woman held in a KGB dungeon under constant interrogation. We have learnt that, as a result of our demonstrations which began only two weeks ago, she has been removed from the dungeon to a women's prison.

We shall not rest until she is free. Raiza Palatnik and others like her need the support of every Jewish woman. We want your help!

Your personality in the summer starts from the feet up. If the shoes pinch, they warp your ego too. Let them be cool, light and free from heel to tender toe, and just see how you will blossom forth, especially if they have fashion, too. And fashion feet this year are all tied up as the pictures show.

Left to right: Sandal that ties up to the knee, boot-wise, in pink suede, at Russell and Bromley of Bond Street at £6.50. White and silver sandal, the lighter base — just enough to provide the delicate mixture from Three-strap white leather at £6.50. A word of warning; most cheese cake failures are due to two main factors (a) the use of too rich a cheese which separates in the oven or (b) over-cooking the mixture so that it rises too much and then falls because of its delicate texture.

Her second century

Two candles on the birthday cake can be to celebrate not the second year of your life but the second century.

So it was with Mrs Vilma Liebmann who celebrated her 102nd birthday at Waverley Manor, where she is a resident.

Mrs Liebmann has been a resident of Waverley Manor for some time but the interesting thing about this elegant home for elderly Jewish people is that it is basically a short-stay house, probably the only one of its kind in the country.

The home caters specially for old people while the house with whom they normally are on holiday, or for people who live alone and a break from fending for themselves.

Although only able-bodied people are catered for, plans are to extend the house to include provisions for special care.

Cheese Cake perfection

EVELYN ROSE

I cannot say "this is a perfect recipe" because Cheese Cake has so many different expressions. But if you want to make what has now become known as "American Cheese Cake" I think this version takes a lot of beating.

The sour cream is mixed into the cake rather than garnishing it afterwards, and I think this improves the texture. The base is a matter of choice; if you like pastry then the one I give is probably the best — crisp with icing sugar so that it doesn't become soggy. Alternatively, the sponge fingers give a lighter base — just enough to provide the delicate mixture from over-cooking.

A word of warning; most cheese cake failures are due to two main factors (a) the use of too rich a cheese which separates in the oven or (b) over-cooking the mixture so that it rises too much and then falls because of its delicate texture.

A Cheese Cake doesn't need to be completely solid when it comes out of the oven. Like a custard, it continues to set as it cools so, providing the inch of mixture round the tin is firm to the touch, the cake can be taken out.

CHEESE CAKE 1971

Crust
(a) Enough trifle sponges or slices of stale home-made sponge to line the bottom of an 8-inch or 9-inch loosebottom tin or (b) 4 oz. self raising flour; 2 1/2 oz. butter; 1/2 oz. icing sugar; 1 egg yolk; a few drops of vanilla essence.

Method
Stir the icing sugar into the butter then add the yolk, the vanilla and the flour. Chill for 1-hour then roll out to fit the tin (a 9-inch sandwich tin about 2 inches deep is ideal for the pastry liner).

1905 An important year for coffee lovers

It was the year Dr. Ludwig Roselius discovered how to remove caffeine from coffee without altering its flavour.

Since then, thanks to him and his Kaffee H.A.G., no one need say "No" to coffee! People with hearts or nerves that must not be over stimulated, or who must watch their digestion, and all those who "Can't sleep after coffee" can enjoy good coffee as strong as they like, as often as they like, whenever they like — H.A.G. coffee, which many prefer for its flavour alone.

ENJOY GOOD COFFEE AND GOOD SLEEP!

Ask for H.A.G. the decaffeinated Coffee — beans, ground or instant. Any coffee, send 10p stamp for leaflet and nearest retailer's name to The H.A.G. Supply Co. Ltd., Dept. H1 31-32a Finsbury Park, London N.10.

Birth of a youth centre

comprising a lecture hall and discotheque with sports and cultural facilities.

But more than a glamorous meeting place, the centre is regarded by Chief Rabbi Jakobovits as "a milestone on the road to reclaiming Jewish identification."

While the Jewish spirit will be encouraged subtly, rather than didactically, by means of lectures and the presence of a trained youth leader, the centre's affairs will be run by a committee of young people.

The Western Synagogue does not intend to restrict use of the centre to the synagogue's own members. "They will steer it in the early days, but the firm plan is to make it as autonomous as possible, as quickly as possible," Mr Reeback explains.

Exterior of the proposed youth centre at the Western Synagogue

The religious hierarchy have been aware for a long time now that intelligent young Jews do not stay Jewish within an ethnic vacuum, yet it has taken years to come up with a positive and cohesive plan for their reintegration into the Jewish society.

If this one comes off—it will be only the beginning. One community centre for the whole of Britain is surely not enough.

Let us hope the vision of the Western Synagogue will stimulate other Jewish communities in Britain to act, too.

Mr Morris insists that the question of membership of the synagogue as a criterion for joining the JM has not been raised by the council since the group's formation.

No doubt there is right and wrong on both sides. But has anyone considered where the members of JM will go for their recreation now that the club has closed?

one of the council members and he informed myself and others that they had been 'gunning' for us for the past two years, and that the so-called mess was the first excuse they had." He added that it was the club's policy that membership should be open to all Jewish youth.

Mr Harry Morris, chairman of the synagogue, denies that discrimination on the grounds of non-membership of the synagogue was the reason. In his view it was due to the "unauthorised use of the synagogue for a dance and the subsequent misuse and damage which took place during the evening."

This was followed by the group arranging a club night on the last evening of Passover. "After our objections on religious grounds our service in the synagogue was repeatedly disturbed by the use of the public telephone in the foyer by members of the group," Mr Morris adds.

in • brief

● A group of Reform rabbis met recently at a two-day residential conference organised by Mr John Kay, the youth development officer of the Reform Synagogues of Great Britain, to discuss rabbinic involvement in the changing patterns of youth work today.

The discussion groups were led by Dr Wendy Greengross and Mr Sidney Bunt, of the Association for Jewish Youth.

They concluded that the rabbi should regard himself as a friend rather than a dispenser of doctrine and truth, and should act as an intermediary between the young and the old.

A follow-up conference will be held in the autumn. It is hoped that this will provide a "service" training for Reform rabbis in Britain, many of whom are the rabbinate via the youth movement.

This new departure follows a comprehensive report on youth work, "Towards the Reform Synagogue," published by the Reform Synagogues of Great Britain in 1969.

● The ten Maccabi participants in the annual Israeli three-day event have returned to London but otherwise in tip-top form.

Their ebullient embassy, the Benkler, reports that the group's 13-day stay, in Tel Aviv, Nuhariya, Western Galilee, and Jerusalem, was a most interesting and profitable one.

In their T-shirts with the Maccabi emblem on it and their Jack adorned hats, they were seen in the only youth synagogue from abroad to participate in the march.

Brady awards

One of the oldest Jewish clubs, Brady, which was founded in the East End in 1888, celebrated its 70th birthday last week.

Frank Austin, Brady's 30th anniversary guest, was there last year, was there on both with his wife, Jeanne, to see the prizes. On the night after a short mannequin parade the Brady Settlement played both sexes, dressed in anti-war sketches, great and being placed on Vietnam.

Above, J. Herman and B. G. joint editors of the club magazine received the literary award.

Sessions will be held at the Lubavitch Centre. Free luncheons will be provided during July mornings and afternoons. There will be no charge for the courses.

Alan Kaufman has been admitted a solicitor of the Supreme Court and a member of the Law Society.

tion, which started in November, 1969 and which caused a mini-revolution in the chaplaincy board earlier this year, has reached a successful conclusion.

Since 1969, Rabbi Rosin has carried out his full-time chaplaincy duties unpaid, and in the past 18 months has transformed the region into one of the healthiest in IJUF.

Remote, smaller societies have been revitalised and even the weakest campuses have had monthly meetings. Regular educational study and discussion groups have been running weekly in Edinburgh and Glasgow, and lunch-time groups have met at the Universities of Strathclyde and Glasgow. Stirling too now has regular discussion meetings—the university didn't even have a society 15 months ago.

Chaplain gains recognition

The Jewish students of Scotland and North-East England have at last succeeded in getting their chaplaincy finalised, reports Paul Morron, IJUF senior vice-chairman and national regional co-ordinator.

The official appointment of Rabbi Michael Rosin as full-time chaplain to the northern region of IJUF began on April 1, 1971, and was made by the Glasgow Hillel committee with the backing of the Chief Rabbi's chaplaincy board.

Thus the struggle for recognition
